Winter 2003-04

A message from the President

I would like to thank all of those Marshall Scholars who responded to our year-end dues contribution solicitation. Marshall Scholars contributed over $14,000, which will help support the Association's ongoing operations and make a significant contribution to the Capital Fund. The British Council officials assisting the fundraising effort were very impressed by this showing of American generosity — and all of us appreciate the laudable spirit these contributions represented. The updates that scholars provided will be published in future editions of this newsletter.

This year, the Marshall Aid Commemoration Commission has volunteered to help publish a hard-copy Directory of Marshall Scholars, which should be a valuable tool in encouraging connection among the Marshall Scholarship community. We are currently trying to update information on the Marshall Scholars, so if your information has changed or if you know the coordinates of any of the “lost” Scholars listed at the end of newsletter, we would certainly appreciate receiving that information. Please contact Kathy Culpin of the British Council at Kathy.Culpin@us.british-council.org with any pertinent information.

New Scholarships Available

Starting with the 2004 Scholars, the Marshall Aid Commemoration Commission has begun awarding additional, specialized Marshall Scholarships, in addition to the usual 40 Scholarships awarded each year, as the final step in the plans to increase the number of available Scholarships. These Scholarships are the result of new partnerships with Imperial College London, the University of Nottingham, the U.K. Department of Trade and Industry, and the U.S. National Institutes of Health.

Three Imperial Marshall Scholarships will be awarded each year for the study in any subject offered at Imperial College London. These Scholarships will be for three years.

One Nottingham Marshall Scholarship will be awarded annually for the study of any subject at either master's or doctoral level. The Scholarship will be for two years, with the possibility of a third year for doctoral studies.

In order to be considered for the Imperial or Nottingham Marshall Scholarships, candidates will be required to list those respective institutions as either their first or second choice on their applications.

Finally, one Texas Marshall Scholarship will be awarded each year for research or taught courses in the subject areas of bioscience, medicine, and related disciplines with predominant application in bioscience. To be eligible for this scholarship, candidates must be either attending or have graduated from a leading university in Texas, and must apply through the Houston region: This scholarship is funded by the British Department of Trade and Industry.

Finally, any Marshall Scholar who is selected for research in a biomedical or science field will be eligible for the NIH Marshall Scholarships. Chosen scholars will spend two years in the UK as regular Marshall Scholars, then will spend the next two years at the U.S. National Institutes of Health in Bethesda, Md., conducting research. The chosen scholar will receive joint supervision from their British university and the NIH, and will ultimately receive a doctoral degree from the British institution.

London Celebration Marks Anniversary

Almost 100 current and former Marshall Scholars and scores of distinguished guests gathered for a celebration of the 50th anniversary of the Marshall Scholarships and the presentation of the first Marshall Medals on November 19. The ceremony, which took place in the elegant Senate House at the University of London, was hosted by CNN's Christiane Amanpour and the BBC's Jeremy Paxman.

The keynote address at the event was delivered by Thomas Friedman ('75), foreign affairs columnist for the New York Times. Friedman praised the long-standing "special relationship" between the United States and the United Kingdom, and argued for the maintenance and strengthening of programs like the Marshall Scholarship which contribute to strong transatlantic ties.

The Marshall Medals are intended to commemorate the achievements of distinguished Americans who have contributed to some aspect of British-American relations. The inaugural medals were awarded to Friedman; Ray Dolby ('57), inventor of digital sound technologies; Nannerl Keohane ('61), president of Duke University; and former U.S. Senator George Mitchell, now Chancellor of Queen's University, Belfast, who facilitated the peace process in Northern Ireland in the 1990s. Supreme Court Justice Stephen Breyer ('59); Christopher Makins, President of the Marshall Sherfield Foundation; and Secretary of State Colin Powell were also awarded medals but were unable to attend the ceremony.

HRH The Prince of Wales delighted the crowd with a brief speech. He joked, "I am very proud to be the honorary patron of the Marshall Scholarships — although I have no idea why I am the honorary patron considering my own academic record." At the reception after the event, many scholars took the opportunity to speak with Prince Charles, who mingled with the crowd.

Current scholars also gathered informally before and after the event with a number of former scholars, including Friedman and Time's London bureau chief, Jef McAllister ('79). The former scholars shared stories of their time as students in England and reflected on their careers. "Meeting successful Marshalls gives us something to aspire to," said Vipin Narang ('02), a Stanford alumnus who is studying international relations at Oxford.

Jonathan Taylor, chairman of the Marshall Commission, noted that some 1,400 Americans have now served as Marshall Scholars, and assured that their ranks would continue to grow in the coming years.

— Daniel Baer ('01)

Joe Eachus, Husband of Barbara, Dies

Joe Eachus, husband of Barbara Eachus, passed away in Boston on December 9.

The Eachuses were well known to several generations of Marshall Scholars. After she retired, Barbara (who worked at the British Consulate in Boston) and Joe, with a small cadre of Marshall alumni, established the Marshall Scholar Alumni Association. They spent hundreds of hours tracking down past Marshalls — no mean feat in the pre-Internet era — and established the first Alumni Association database. For a number of years, they also produced the Association newsletter.

Donations in Joe's memory should be sent to the Bletchley Park Trust, The Mansion, Bletchley Park, Milton Keynes MK3 6EB, England. The next edition of the Alumni Association Directory will be dedicated to Joe's memory. He will be sorely missed.

Launching A “Marshall Plan” For Rwanda's First Public Library

In September 2002, the 2002 class of Marshall Scholars took the unprecedented step of collaborating to support a cause reflective of the humanitarian spirit and ideals of the Marshall Scholarships. Recognizing that Marshall Scholars are chosen in part for their commitment to George Marshall's lofty principles, our class thought it important that Marshall Scholars demonstrate this commitment not only with words but with action. For this reason, the 2002 Marshall Scholars formed Marshall Scholars for the Kigali Public Library (MSKPL), an organization that aims to help realize the dream of building Rwanda's first public library.

For decades, Rwanda suffered from isolation, violence, and extremism, culminating in a 1994 genocide during which the country's Hutu ethnic majority orchestrated the brutal murder of approximately one million Rwandans of Tutsi ethnic descent. This genocide left the country devastated, severely depleting the population and destroying the foundation of trust and mutual cooperation necessary for democracy to thrive. Today, however, Rwanda has begun to rebuild its government, its infrastructure, and its social bonds. One of the most integral projects in this process is the construction of Rwanda's first public library.

Democracy requires a well-informed population, and maintaining peace in a post-conflict society requires public spaces where people can gather and exchange ideas. The Kigali Public Library seeks to provide both. Successful completion of this monumental effort will mark a watershed in Rwanda's history. Whereas Rwandans were once armed only with the tools to kill, it is our hope that this library will equip them with the tools necessary to combat the stultifying burdens of ignorance and conformity and to rebuild Rwandan society.

The construction of the Kigali Public Library will also send a strong message to the Rwandan people and to the world that this troubled country is committed to opening a new chapter in its history. The library will not only be a sanctuary for knowledge and a forum for the free exchange of ideas, but also a symbolic monument to genocide victims and a permanent reminder that the atrocities committed in 1994 will never be forgotten.

When we formed MSKPL, the Kigali Public Library campaign had already donations and pledges of over $1 million. Those contributions came from individuals, foundations, corporations, governments, and intergovernmental organizations. Among the donors were Rotary International; The Dian Fossey Gorilla Fund International; The Boeing Company; the Governments of Canada, Switzerland, and Rwanda; and the European Union. However, the campaign still needed another $200,000 to allow the library to open, and another $500,000 to secure the library's $1.7 million endowment and ensure the library's sustainability.

Therefore, our efforts to support the Kigali Public Library are threefold. At Oxford, where the largest group of 2002 Marshall Scholars is based, we have established a Fundraising Committee, led by Lauren Baer ('02). This committee has launched an extensive campaign to solicit contributions from American and European sources. To date, several thousand dollars has already been raised, and in addition, the academic publisher W.W. Norton & Co. has pledged 12,500 books for the library. MSKPL has also received endorsements from the Marshall Aid Commemoration Commission; the Marshall Alumni Association; the Rotary Clubs of Cambridge, England; Palm Beach, Florida; and West Palm Beach, Florida; Dr. John Brademas, President Emeritus of New York University and former United States Congressman; and Harry A. Johnston, II, former United States Congressman and former Chairman of the Africa Sub-Committee of the House Committee on International Relations.

The efforts of our fundraising committee are complemented by our London-based Public Awareness Committee. This committee has initiated a campaign that includes soliciting press coverage of the library and MSKPL's efforts as well as arranging speaking engagements to educate the public about our cause. Speeches have been delivered to the Rotary Clubs in Oxford and Cambridge, England; Palm Beach and West Palm Beach, Florida; and in Umeå, Sweden, and future speaking engagements are scheduled at the University of Wales, Aberystwyth; the University of Nottingham; and at Rotary Clubs in Radlett, England, and Wellesley, Massachusetts. It is our hope that such awareness-raising activities will draw national and international attention to the project, thereby assisting both our fundraising efforts and the cause of genocide recovery and prevention.

Finally, we are planning a trip to Rwanda in July which will coincide with the planned grand opening of the library. In conjunction with our Rwandan colleagues, we have developed an itinerary that involves service to the library, education, cross-cultural interaction, and publicity. There, we intend to present the KPL with a check in the total amount of funds raised to date, assist final preparations for the library opening, conduct genocide site visits with survivor groups, meet with government officials and civil society organizations and conduct literacy and education programs at areas schools at the invitation of U.S. Ambassador to Rwanda Margaret McMillion. To us, this trip is not merely a culmination of our fundraising and public awareness efforts. Rather, it is a means of engaging with the people of Rwanda, of learning from their experiences and laying the foundation for future collaboration. It is a way to remind the world of the horrors of 1994 and to educate people about the progress Rwanda has made. It is a way of using our intellect and effort to improve the world in which we live.

As Marshall alumni, you have the potential greatly to facilitate the success of our project, and we seek your support in achieving our goals. The first and most obvious way to aid the Kigali Public Library is by making a tax-deductible donation. We would welcome both financial donations and in-kind donations (of books, computers, and training).

The second way you can help is by sharing your knowledge and contacts. We would be most appreciative if you introduced us to other individuals and organizations that might be interested in supporting the Kigali Public Library, whether financially or otherwise.

Finally, and most importantly, you can join MSKPL yourself, raise public awareness about the library, and help us to solicit funds.

If you have any questions about these matters, please contact us.

It is a rare privilege to live in a society that makes possible the free exchange of ideas and the unfettered pursuit of knowledge. We hope that you will join us in making such a society possible for the people of Rwanda.

— Zachary D. Kaufman ('02)
and Lauren E. Baer ('02)

Editor's note: Zachary Kaufman is president of MSKPL, and Lauren Baer is fundraising director. The website of MSKPL can be found at www.marshallscholarship.org/kpl. Donations, made out to The American Friends of the Kigali Public Library, can be sent to Zachary Kaufman, Magdalen College, Oxford OX1 4AU, England.

Koh Named Yale Dean

Yale University recently announced the appointment of Harold Hongju Koh ('75), an expert on human rights and international law, as dean of Yale Law School. Koh, who has taught at Yale Law School since 1985, served as Assistant Secretary of State for Democracy, Human Rights and Labor from 1998 to 2001.

"As a scholar, teacher, lawyer and public servant, Harold Koh embodies those qualities that distinguish Yale's great Law School — a love of learning and a passion for justice,"

Yale President Richard C. Levin said. "He is a natural leader who has earned the overwhelming support and confidence of faculty, students, alumni and staff. We all look forward to his stewardship."

Koh, 48, the Gerard C. and Bernice Latrobe Smith Professor of International Law, is one of the country's leading experts on international law, international human rights, national security law, and international economic law. He has received more than twenty awards for his human rights work. He was named by American Lawyer in 1997 as one of America's 45 leading public sector lawyers under the age of 45. In 2000, he was named by A as one of the 100 most influential Asian-Americans of the 1990s.

"It is the greatest honor of my life to be asked to serve as dean of the world's leading law school," Koh said. "For four decades I have been privileged to participate in that unique community of commitment to world-class scholarship, public service and professional excellence that Yale Law School represents. I look forward to leading this school I love into a new global century."

Koh has written more than 80 articles and authored or co-edited "Different But Equal: The Human Rights of Persons with Intellectual Disabilities" (2003); "Transnational Business Problems" (2003); "Deliberative Democracy and Human Rights" (1999); the "Justice Harry Blackmun Supreme Court Oral History" (1995, release date 2004); "Transnational Legal Problems" (1984); and "The National Security Constitution" (1990), which won the American Political Science Association's award as best book on the American presidency. His current research concerns why nations do or do not obey international law.

A graduate of Harvard College, Oxford and Harvard Law School, Koh served as law clerk to Judge Malcolm Wilkey of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the D.C. Circuit, and Justice Harry Blackmun of the U.S. Supreme Court. Before coming to Yale, he practiced law at the Washington law firm of Covington and Burling and at the Office of Legal Counsel at the Department of Justice.

A Fellow of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences, Koh is an Honorary Fellow of Magdalen College, Oxford, and has been a Visiting Fellow at All Souls College, Oxford. He is an Overseer of Harvard University and on the Visiting Committee of Harvard Law School, an editor of the American Journal of International Law and a member of the American Law Institute. He has received Guggenheim and Century Foundation Fellowships and has been awarded seven honorary doctorates and law school medals from the Villanova Law School and Touro Law School. In 2003, Columbia Law School awarded him the Wolfgang Friedmann Memorial Award for his contributions to international law.

The Koh family came to New Haven in 1961. Koh; his brother, Howard; his mother, Dr. Hesung Chun Koh; and his father, the late Dr. Kwang Lim Koh, were recently named to the K100, the 100 leading Koreans and Korean-Americans in the century of Korean immigration to the United States. His parents and his sister, Jean Koh Peters, have all taught at Yale Law School. Koh lives in New Haven with his wife, Mary-Christy Fisher, an attorney at New Haven Legal Assistance Association, and their children, Emily and William.

Koh's five-year term will begin in July. He is the second former Marshall Scholar to be appointed dean of a major American law school in recent years. Kathleen Sullivan ('76) currently serves as dean of the Stanford Law School. She recently announced that she would be stepping down at the end of the academic year to return to teaching.

Class Notes

1959

Frank Trumbower recently lost his wife to cancer. He intends to move back to New York and split his time between New York and Park City, Utah. We send Frank our sincerest condolences.

1969

Robert A. Oden, Jr. (Pembroke College, Cambridge), is now in his second year as the president of Carleton College, after seven years as the president of Kenyon College. Says Robert: "American liberal arts colleges are a distinct, even unique, construction, and I'm not convinced there is a finer such than Carleton."

1970

Jean E. Howard (University College, London) is now a professor of English at Columbia University. This academic year, she is serving as a research fellow at the Huntington Library in Pasadena, California, where she is finishing a book called "Theater of a City: Social Change and Generic Innovation on the Early Modern Stage." Her son, Caleb, is a sophomore at Oberlin, and her daughter, Katherine, has graduated from Yale and is participating in the Teach for America program in Compton, California. Her husband, Jim, practices public service law in New York City.

1971

Marty Kaplan is associate dean of the USC Annenberg School for Communication.

1972

Bob Rizzi is a tax partner in the law firm of O'Melveny and Myers LLP in Washington and Menlo Park, Cal.

1975

John Head (University College, Oxford) is in his 13th year of teaching international and comparative law at the University of Kansas, where he moved after serving on the legal staffs of the Asian Development Bank and the International Monetary Fund. He recently co-authored a book on preventing banking crises in less developed countries and published another book on the Asian Development Bank. He often takes on overseas assignments — either teaching or consulting — in the summer months, typically with one of his children before they all leave the house. His wife, Lucia, is a novelist. Their children are Alex, currently a junior at Pomona College near Los Angeles; Austen, a high school senior considering college possibilities, and Jessica, a high school junior “considering boys.”

Joseph M. Schwartz is an associate professor and chair of the political science department at Temple University.

1982

John B. Stephens was recently granted tenure and promoted to associate professor of government at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. He directs the Public Dispute Resolution Program there and has become editor of Popular Government, the flagship journal of the School of Government.

1986

After three years in the State Department's Political-Military Affairs Bureau, working mostly on Nepalese issues, Paul Marks (University of London) is now teaching Chinese at West Point. “I remain eternally grateful for the opportunity the Marshall Scholarship provided,” says Paul.

1987

Brian Taylor is an assistant professor of political science at the University of Oklahoma. His book, Politics and the Russian Army: Civil-Military Relations, 1689-2000, was published by Cambridge University Press last year. He and his wife, Renee de Nevers, have two-year-old twin sons, Anatol and Lucian de Nevers.

1988

Patrick Byrne is chief executive of Overstock.com, a discount shopping website that is one of the Web's top e-commerce sites. His company was recently profiled in the Boston Globe.

1989

Thomas Halverson is living in Hong Kong and would like to meet any other Marshalls who happen to be in the neighborhood. He is the head of Credit Risk Management and Advisory for Asia Ex-Japan at Goldman Sachs Asia and has been living in Hong Kong with his wife and two daughters since finally leaving London in 2001. His e-mail address is tom.halverson@gs.com.

1993

A ten-year reunion was held in New York on November 22. Among those in attendance were Josh Busby; Shizuka Hsieh; Nancy Lublin; Michelle Mello; Matt Ringel; Kannon Shanmugam; Loren Siebert; and a number of spouses and partners. As the editor can attest, it was a wonderful evening, with many fond reminiscences of our time together in the UK. A fifteenth reunion is already being planned for 2008.

Kate Rodriguez-Clark is a postdoctoral fellow in conservation genetics at the Venezuelan Institute for Scientific Investigation.

Jade Newburn (Balliol College, Oxford) worked for two years as an associate at McKinsey & Co. in Chicago, and then attended Harvard Law School. He will return to Chicago this summer as an associate with the law firm of Mayer, Brown, Rowe & Maw. In 2002, he married Mary Lubner. His e-mail address is jade_newburn@hotmail.com.
