THE MARSHALL AID COMMEMORATION COMMISSION’S REPORT TO HER MAJESTY’S PRINCIPAL SECRETARY OF STATE FOR FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS.

Pursuant to Section 2(6) of the Marshall Aid Commemoration Act 1953, we have the honour to submit the report of the Marshall Aid Commemoration Commission for the year ending 30 September 2018.

WELCOME FROM MR CHRISTOPHER FISHER

It is my pleasure and privilege to chair the Marshall Commission, and I am delighted to be able to report on another successful year in the life of the Marshall Scholarship Programme.

In the cycle of each reporting year we begin in the autumn with candidate selection, stretching over several weeks, and end the following September welcoming the new Class so selected. In between, we seek to underpin the experience our Scholars are gaining through their studies at British universities and colleges with support and a programme of activities and engagement. During each year we also seek to sustain and enhance the financial support we receive from third parties, notably our academic partners, as well as supporting the activities of our alumni organisation, the Association of Marshall Scholars (AMS).

The incoming Class of 2018 was formally welcomed to the UK at a reception at the Foreign Office hosted by Sir Simon McDonald, its Permanent Under-Secretary, as part of an induction programme which included a first visit by our Scholars to the new US Embassy in London, where we were met by Ambassador Woody Johnson. The Class of 2018 comprised 43 Scholars (2017: 40, 2016: 32), including the first award funded by the new AMS endowment, created to mark the 70th Anniversary of George Marshall’s Commencement Address at Harvard in 1947, which was to launch the Marshall Plan. I have every confidence that this new class of Scholars will be as challenging, engaging, dynamic, curious, enthusiastic and ambitious as we could hope, and it has the distinction of being the first class of Marshall Scholars of whom a majority are women.

With many of our Scholars often choosing to study in London, Oxford and Cambridge, we recognise the importance of fostering their exposure to other parts of the country. Our Easter excursion this year took us to Manchester and Liverpool, where we were made most welcome by the Vice-Chancellors of Manchester and Liverpool Universities, Professor Dame Nancy Rothwell and Professor Dame Janet Beer, as well as the Mayor of Manchester, Andy Burnham. Much of the contrasting challenges which had been faced by the two cities was conveyed, as well as the achievements of their present positions, together with their further potential. It was a most worthwhile visit, and the generous hospitality of Manchester University was much appreciated. The Marshall Plus programme, as described more fully later in this report, also seeks to broaden Scholars insights in to the UK, and I thank my fellow Commissioner, Suzanne McCarthy, for leading this successful initiative.

In January the Foreign Office organised a visit by the Scholars to 10 Downing Street, and provided a follow up seminar with senior Foreign Office officials, as well as a brief encounter with the Foreign Secretary. The principal guest at our Annual Dinner in May was Baroness Sayeedi Warsi, the first member of a British Cabinet of Pakistani Muslim heritage. This was an occasion to celebrate the achievements of those Scholars whose time with us was drawing to a close and to recognise our wider family of supporters whose engagement is so important to us.

Of the six Marshall Medals awarded in 2017 to mark the 70th Anniversary of Marshall’s Harvard Address, four were presented at the associated event. Of the other two, David Miliband was presented with his Medal at a special event in June, hosted by University College, London (UCL), and Reid Hoffman was presented with his Medal at the annual AMS Conference held at Stanford University later that month. Following this Conference, the AMS generously introduced with effect from September 2018 a new alumni funded annual award to each current Scholar of £1,000 to supplement their stipend and thereby enhance their experience in the UK. The Commission very much welcomes this initiative – Marshall Xtra – which builds on long established support given by the AMS for such events as the Scholars’ annual Thanksgiving Dinner.
The challenge to the Commission following HMG’s welcome decision at the end of 2016 to increase its funding of the Marshall Scholarship Programme was to see what additional funding could be secured from third parties, when it could be seen that such support would have an incremental rather than substitutional effect. I am delighted to able to say that since 2016 new and existing academic partners have responded generously to this opportunity. Our support in London has significantly deepened with two or three fee-waiver partnership places now available each year at all of Imperial, King’s, LSE, LSHTM, Queen Mary, SOAS and UCL; at Oxford we have forged new partnerships with the following colleges: Balliol, Exeter, Lincoln, Magdalen and University; similarly at Cambridge, Emmanuel, Pembroke, Peterhouse and Trinity have now agreed to partner us in this way; and Edinburgh and Manchester, which are regularly popular with our Scholars, have also deepened their support. I am also pleased to report that Cambridge is introducing a new partnership to support doctoral Scholars, similar to the arrangement we already have with Oxford. In highlighting new support, this should not be at the expense of appreciating our established partners – all the leading British universities and a number of other Oxbridge colleges – whose long-standing support has been of real value. Overall this progress is making a significant difference to the scale and sustainability of the Programme and will lead to a further increase in the number of awards made to the incoming Class of 2019.

Finally, let me turn to all the distinguished volunteers who participate in our selection processes each autumn through the reading and appraisal of applications and the interviewing of selected candidates. They are a considerable asset to the Programme and are an essential component of its rigour and integrity and their contribution is much appreciated. Each year we receive some 1,000 endorsed applications and need to do justice to each one of them. Our eight regional selection committees interview around 160 candidates to judge who deserves to receive an award. They do this with great care and diligence. Their Chairs carry significant responsibility, and I would like to record the Commission’s particular thanks for those Chairs who have retired in the last two years: Jeffrey Rosenweig (Atlanta), Katherine Hunt (Chicago), Sarah Bagby (Los Angeles), Karen Sprague (San Francisco) and Craig Schiffries (Washington); and in turn may I welcome their successors, respectively Jane Hawkins, Adam Mortara, Katie Clark, Jacob Chacko and Benjamin Spencer.

This is a time of certain stresses and strains in each of Britain and the US, but we should not let these overwhelm our view of the two countries. In a small, but nevertheless significant and meaningful way, the Marshall Scholarship Programme represents an important strand in British-American relations and the promotion of enlightened understanding of, and affection for, our two peoples. Universities represent one of the UK’s great strengths, and through harnessing their capabilities in learning and research, and in the promotion of thoughtful curiosity, our Scholars are gaining enhanced skills and understanding to equip these future leaders in meeting the challenges and opportunities of tomorrow’s world. This is a worthy endeavour which I believe does justice to the resources which we are fortunate enough to have made available to us.

Marshall Aid Commemoration Commission (MACC)
November 2018
THE MARSHALL AID COMMEMORATION COMMISSION

The Marshall Aid Commemoration Commission Act was passed by the British Parliament in 1953 in order to express gratitude to the American people for the post-war support and assistance conceived by Secretary of State George C Marshall, subsequently known as the Marshall Plan. The Parliamentary Act created postgraduate Scholarships in the United Kingdom for American students with the potential to excel in their chosen fields of study and future careers. As alumni of British Universities and as members of the community during their stay in Britain, Marshall Scholars create lasting bridges between the United States and the United Kingdom and become advocates for greater depth and breadth of interaction, co-operation and mutual understanding between the two countries. Scholars also participate in activities which make them effective spokespeople for the best in British society and education and, once they have completed their studies, continue to support the furtherance of international co-operation in the spirit of the Marshall Plan.

Each year up to 50 Marshall Scholarships are awarded, many in partnership with outstanding British Universities, thus providing continuing recognition for the generosity of the past while supporting the promise of the future. This unique testament plays a vital role in developing a constituency for Britain in the United States of America.

The programme is largely funded by HM Government through the Foreign and Commonwealth Office (FCO) alongside partnerships with British Universities and others, and is administered in Britain by the Marshall Aid Commemoration Commission, with the support of the British Embassy in Washington DC, and the Consulates-General in Atlanta, Boston, Chicago, Houston, Los Angeles, New York and San Francisco. HRH Prince of Wales is Honorary Patron of the Association of Marshall Scholars.

Marshall Aid Commemoration Commission
SCHOLARS GRADUATING IN 2018

25 Scholars completed tenure of their awards in 2018. Of these, six had graduated at the time of completion. The remaining Scholars, who are registered for doctorates or research/taught Master’s programmes, will complete the requirements for their degrees in the coming months.

The examination results of 34 Scholars were received during the year – one from the 2006 class, one from the 2009 class, one from the 2010 class; two from the 2011 class; one from the 2012 class, six from the 2013 class, five from the 2014 class; nine from the 2015 class; seven from the 2016 class and one from the 2017 class. Twelve of these obtained doctorates, the rest obtained master’s degrees.

The names of all Scholars on whom degrees were conferred during 2017/2018 or for whom the Commission received results, are listed at the end of this Report (Page 31).

One Scholar was granted an extension for a third year of their tenure in 2018/19. This Scholar will be fully funded by the Commission. Two further Scholars were granted extensions for a third year of their tenure under the Oxford Marshall Scholarship.

EPA MARSHALL SCHOLARSHIPS

Until 2018 the Commission held a grant from the US Environmental Protection Agency (EPA). This grant allowed Marshall Scholars to undertake a doctorate, either in the UK or the US, after they completed their two year tenure on the Marshall Scholarship funding. The last grant under this agreement was received in March 2018 and no new awards will be made under this agreement. The Commission will bear the outstanding costs of the Scholars completing their doctorates.

In 2017/18 three Scholars were funded by the EPA completing doctorates in the UK at Imperial College London, Green Templeton College, Oxford and Somerville College, Oxford.

SCHOLARS’ EXPERIENCES

Robert Clinton
2016 Marshall Scholar

MSc: Sustainable Urban Development
MPA Public Administration and Management
University College London (UCL)

I arrived in the United Kingdom in autumn 2016 after graduating from New York University’s Gallatin School of Individualized Study. My Bachelor of Arts degree was centred around the study of the relationship between the built and natural environment through the lens of food. I graduated having won a number of university grants to conduct independent research outside of the United States, and those experiences opened my mind to the possibility of postgraduate study abroad.

The Marshall Scholarship was the ideal continuation in my academic journey because it provided the opportunity to learn from scholars and practitioners in my field whilst facilitating genuine, often extracurricular, relationship building. In the same way that General Marshall believed that international co-operation was necessary to secure global peace and well-being in the aftermath of World War II, and that the only way that could happen was through ‘an understanding on the part of the people of America of the character of the problem and the remedies to be applied,’ I believe that the issues of today can best be solved by immersing oneself in a foreign context to examine issues from a unfamiliar perspective. For me, that manifested as a passion for understanding urban (re)development. London was an entirely new, and exciting, laboratory for learning. Outside of my coursework as part of my MSc in Sustainable Urbanism through the Bartlett School of Planning, I contributed to research at UCL’s Urban Lab on the capital’s LGBTQ+ Nightlife Spaces and their evolution since the 1980s. This work was commissioned by the Mayor of London and shaped his Cultural Infrastructure Plan. Watching research become policy both fascinated me and inspired my to change my second year plan of study to focus more on the government’s role in city building. An Masters in Public Administration and Management rounded out my tenure as a Marshall Scholar and led directly into my current role as the Civic Engagement Coordinator at the City of San Francisco’s Office of Civic Engagement and Immigrant Affairs.

The Marshall Scholarship is, at its core, a gift. Citizens of the UK were kind enough to subsidise my education, and indeed entire life, so it seemed necessary to contribute to British life in some way. Over my two years, I volunteered for The Food Chain (TFC) , a charity that provided cooking and nutrition courses, meals, and a grocery delivery service to people in London living with HIV. I also ran in the British 10K as part of a fundraising campaign for TFC (my first and last race– I ached for weeks after). I also worked in the kitchen of an upscale restaurant, was a member of the Borough Market Cookbook Club, and formed lifelong friendships with folks from around the UK. It is a privilege to be a Marshall Scholar; this opportunity was one of the best that I have ever received, and it has been surprisingly difficult to transition ‘back to real life.’ I’ve come away with more knowledge about issues in and outside of my area of study, lifelong friendships, a deeper understanding of the UK and global politics more broadly, and,
perhaps most importantly, a profound appreciation for the Special Relationship.

Bianca Lepe
2016 Marshall Scholar
MSc Systems and Synthetic Biology
University of Edinburgh
MPhil Technology Policy
Lucy Cavendish College, Cambridge

I graduated from the California Institute of Technology in 2016 with a B.Sc. in Bioengineering and Business, Economics and Management (BEM). At Caltech, I had the opportunity to participate in undergraduate research and particularly enjoyed participating in an annual international synthetic biology competition called iGEM (International Genetically Engineered Machine).

My interest in the field of synthetic biology, along with a remarkable study abroad experience in London, led me to pursue postgraduate work abroad.

The University of Edinburgh (UoE), where I pursued my first M.Sc. in Systems and Synthetic Biology, is a world leader in this new field and offered a desirable cross-disciplinary approach in its taught and research components. In particular, I was able to tailor my electives to include bio-business, industry and entrepreneurship, and the social dimensions of systems and synthetic biology. I greatly appreciated the industrial placement option for my dissertation project. I worked at a biotechnology startup that was spun-out of the university, called Neurocentrx. Under the supervision of Dr. Carmel Reilly (CEO and UoE alumna), I learned about the translation of research into viable products that positively impact human health. Overall, my first program sparked my interest in the intersection between science, business and government which inspired me to pursue an MPhil in Technology Policy at the University of Cambridge.

Highlights from my second year program included a class on negotiation, and learning about strategy and innovation in the digital age. The international bent of the program proved excellent in delving into science and technology policy both in the context of emerging countries and developed ones such as the UK and European Union. My program also illustrated the latter through a class trip to the European Commission and EU Court of Justice. Moreover, I was able have a hands on experience solving policy issues through my dissertation, where my team worked with Genomics England Limited (GeL) and the NHS to advise on electronic consent implementation in their anticipated rollout of a genomics medical service. In particular, we developed a framework that evaluates e-consent technologies on ethical, operational, security, and data privacy aspects. I will use the knowledge and skills gained from both programs to pursue a Ph.D. in Bioengineering and a future career in science and technology policy.

My two years in the UK were phenomenal opportunities for personal and intellectual growth; they also enabled me to make lifelong international friendships. One particular quote from Mary Denyer that ‘things in the UK are different’ resonates with me because it implies that differences are not necessarily negative but offer insight into variable ways of thinking and experiencing the world. Meeting people of different backgrounds, living in a different country and adapting to new societal norms help uncover variable perspectives. Undoubtedly, I am indebted to the Marshall Scholarship for allowing me the chance to obtain such tacit knowledge. I believe learning and understanding different perspectives, both academically and socially, has enabled me to think and approach problem solving more effectively and will prove an invaluable asset to my career and life in general.

Skyler Ross
2016 Marshall Scholar
MA Creative Producing
Royal Central School of Speech and Drama
MA Cultural and Creative Industries
King’s College London

Prior to my time in the UK as a Marshall Scholar, I received a Bachelor of Arts in History from Yale University. While studying at Yale, I spent a substantial amount of time participating in extracurricular theatre, first as a performer and later as a producer. I was attracted to study in the UK due to Britain’s outsized impact on global theatre, arts, and culture.

In my first year as a Marshall Scholar, I earned a MA Creative Producing from the Royal Central School of Speech and Drama, which offers the most comprehensive array of arts degree options in Europe. The hallmark of the program was a sustained independent project that enabled me to put classroom insights into practice by organizing two workshops of original musicals. My work for this course put me in touch with theatre practitioners from around the UK, developing links that will likely enable transatlantic projects in the future.
My second year was spent earning a MA Cultural and Creative Industries from King’s College London. The program emphasized conflicting understandings of culture and contrasting modes of analysing the functions and operations of the cultural industries. The course exposed me to a wide range of topics relevant to the cultural sector, including critical theory, perspectives on cosmopolitanism, and global copyright policy. In an effort to expand my horizons beyond theatre, I wrote my dissertation on the political economy of Netflix’s gatekeeping functions, which refer to the ways in which content is selected for inclusion in Netflix’s library and then becomes individually curated on Netflix’s portal.

I thoroughly enjoyed my time studying in the UK, but I also developed genuine appreciation for British culture. I encountered more than 150 cultural events over the course of my two years living in London; highlights include Classic Spring Theatre Company’s Oscar Wilde season, The Inheritance at the Young Vic, and Follies at the National Theatre. I became deeply familiar with the British arts and culture sector through both curricular and extracurricular engagement. But I also was exposed to distinctly British cultural experiences that I will cherish forever—such as when I visited rural Scotland over Christmas and saw an AGA for the first time!

My fondness for the UK is enduring and I will always be grateful to the people of the United Kingdom for the adventure I received. I recently began further study at the UCLA School of Law in its Media, Entertainment and Technology Law and Policy program. I credit my exposure to copyright policy at KCL for my current interest in intellectual property’s role in regulating institutionalized culture. Afterward, I plan to continue my work as an arts producer, scholar, and advocate.

Alina Utrata
2017 Marshall Scholar

MA Conflict Transformation and Social Justice
Queen’s University Belfast

I did my undergraduate degree in History and the Law with a minor in Human Rights at Stanford University. My studies there focused on the intersection between law and society, in particular how transitional justice mechanisms impact communities transitioning from conflict.

My honors thesis, ‘Stories Courts Tell: The Problematic History of the Yugoslav Tribunal in Bosnia and Herzegovina’, looked at the role the Yugoslav Tribunal played in Bosnia and Herzegovina after the Balkans wars of the 1990s.

I studied at the Mitchell Institute for Global Peace, Security and Justice at Queen’s University Belfast (QUB) in the M.A. program on Conflict Transformation and Social Justice. This degree was an absolutely perfect fit for me. The interdisciplinary nature allowed me to continue my focus on law and post-conflict transitions. Additionally, being located in Belfast gave me the invaluable experience of living in a place that is implementing its own peace process.

My research at QUB focused on the perceptions of former Royal Ulster Constabulary officers towards their role in policing during the Troubles. I conducted research in the RUC-George Cross Foundation Oral History Archives as well as interviewing many former RUC officers themselves. I learned a lot about the difficulties in policing a divided community during conflict, as well the challenges of transitioning to policing a peace process.

After my undergraduate degree, I felt strongly that I wanted to live in a place that was actually grappling with the issues I had studied in an academic context. Belfast is probably the only place in the world where someone can both live in a society that is implementing a peace process, as well as study at one of the best academic institutions. Therefore, Northern Ireland seemed like the natural next step in my studies.

The best part of my time in the UK has been getting to know people in Belfast. The Mitchell Institute hosts numerous events over the year, and so I have been able to meet George Mitchell, Jonathan Powell, David Trimble, among other individuals who have contributed to peace in Northern Ireland. I also write for a local publication called ‘Northern Slant’, which is trying to create more constructive and positive dialogue among the media in Northern Ireland. People in Northern Ireland often remark that they have a very peculiar sense of humor, which is rather dark and self-deprecating. I definitely feel that after a year in Belfast that I have picked up on this tendency—which has probably been a good thing for my humility!

My time in Northern Ireland has been absolutely invaluable to my future career plans. While I ultimately want to pursue a law degree in human rights or transitional justice law, I feel that it is absolutely vital to get a better understanding of what ‘peace’ on the ground really looks like. My time in Northern Ireland has given me a better understanding of how people feel about certain transitional justice mechanisms and what is truly important in facilitating transitions between conflict and peace.
MARTSHALL EVENTS

As part of the induction week for the 2017 Scholars which took place in late September 2017, HM Ambassador, Sir Kim Darroch, hosted the group at the Ambassador’s Residence for a reception bringing together more than 120 alumni from the Washington, DC area. Additionally, the group participated in site visits and meetings with Marshall Scholar Alumni working in prominent and influential positions at the Pentagon, US State Department, the White House and the US Congress.

After their arrival in the UK, the 2017 Scholars were taken on a tour of the Houses of Parliament. The tour was arranged through the offices of the British-American Parliamentary Group (BAPG). Scholars met with a member of the BAPG, the Rt Hon John Spellar MP, for a ‘Question and Answer’ session. The Scholars were welcomed to the United Kingdom by the US Ambassador Woody Johnson and other members of staff at the US Embassy. He engaged them in a fascinating discussion about how the UK is perceived by the USA. The Scholars also rode on the London Eye.

The Scholars were welcomed to the UK by the Marshall Commissioners at a briefing held at the FCO and they also met a panel of representatives from the FCO: Ruth Shaw, Head of Soft Power and Joint Engagement, Kathy Leach, Joint Head of Policy Unit and Patrick Reilly, Head of the North America Department. This was followed by Reception held at the FCO, hosted by the Minister of State the Rt Hon Mark Field MP, on 15 September 2017 to welcome the 2017 Scholars.

In addition to these more formal social events, opportunities also arose during the year for some members of the Commission and Secretariat to meet and offer informal hospitality to Scholars at their university locations and in the homes of some Commissioners. The Scholars themselves organised the now traditional Annual Marshall Thanksgiving Dinner which was held at Goodenough College in London on 26 November 2017 and was supported by the AMS.

On 31 January 2018 a group of Scholars were invited to 10 Downing Street for a tour followed by a briefing at the FCO. After the briefing the Scholars met with the then Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs the Rt Hon Boris Johnson MP.

The Marshall Commissioners hosted the annual Dinner, given in honour of Marshall Scholars who were completing their awards, on 8 May 2018 at the Stationers’ Hall, London. The special guest and principal speaker at the Dinner was Baroness Warsi. Mr Skyler Ross, 2016 Marshall Scholar, who studied an MA in Creative Producing at the Royal Central School of Speech and Drama and a MA in Cultural and Creative Industries at King’s College London, spoke on behalf of those Scholars returning to the United States.

On Wednesday 13 June 2018 the Commission organised a lecture by the Rt Hon David Miliband on “Seventy Years Since The Marshall Plan: Is Transatlantic Unity Dead?” The lecture was hosted by UCL and attended by Marshall Scholars and other guests. Christopher Fisher presented Mr Miliband with the Marshall Medal as part of the event.

Marshall Scholar Trip to Manchester and Liverpool

Each year the Commission organises a visit of Marshall Scholars to cities outside of London to give them a greater understanding of the cultural, economic, historical and political diversity of the UK.

In 2018 the Scholars travelled to Manchester and Liverpool for a three day trip. The Assistant Secretary and the Programme Administrator accompanied the Scholars.

The visit was hosted by the Universities of Manchester and Liverpool. The Scholars toured Manchester and Liverpool to learn about the history and culture of the cities. The Vice-Chancellors of both universities met with the Scholars and the Mayor of Manchester, Andy Burnham, briefed them on the progress of Greater Manchester. In addition the University of Manchester organised a panel discussion with representatives from the Manchester City Council. The Commission is very grateful to both universities for hosting such a great event.

Marshall Plus Programme

The Marshall Plus Programme’s aim is to contribute to the overall UK experience of Marshall Scholars by giving them insight into British history, culture and society by exploring topical issues ideally with a UK/USA aspect. The programme is specially varied in order to offer a variety of subjects that will appeal to the wide-ranging interests of the Scholars. The annual programme is composed of both lectures (usually three) and events (usually two). These are arranged around the other activities laid on for Marshall Scholars such as regional visits as well as the normal rhythm of a Marshall Scholar’s academic life.

During 2017/18 the Programme consisted of three lectures and two visits.

These were as follows:

- 15 November 2017
  Prof Sir Hew Strachan – Talk on Britain and the American entry to the First World War, 1917

MPhil International Relations – Magdalen College, Oxford

CEO Generation Impact

I am incredibly indebted to the Marshall Scholarship for the opportunity to study at Oxford University and complete an MPhil in International Relations, before returning to Yale for law School. I had the chance during those two years as a student in the Department of Politics and International Relations to dive in-depth into the study of American foreign policy. The opportunity to research and write about hearts and minds campaigns during unconventional warfare was pivotal in gravitating me towards diplomacy, and I ultimately served as a Senior Advisor at the State Department under Secretary Hillary Clinton and Secretary John Kerry. I then worked as Policy Director to First Lady Michelle Obama at the White House, where I led Let Girls Learn.

My strong ties to the United Kingdom from my time there as a student enabled me to forge a strong partnership with my counterparts in the British government, including at the embassy and DFID. My time at Oxford on the Marshall also gave me the time to conduct independent study of American foreign policy with the benefit of distance. In addition, as a former candidate for Governor, I relied heavily on some relationships forged during my Marshall scholarship as I launched my campaign. I’m deeply grateful for the friendships and connections I made during my two years at Oxford but also with alumni in other classes.
REPORT FROM THE BOARD OF THE ASSOCIATION OF MARSHALL SCHOLARS (AMS)

Dr Neil Breyer, Executive Director
Mr Andrew Klaber President

This year, the Association of Marshall Scholars (AMS) has furthered its strategic priorities: fostering stronger alumni connections, furthering US-UK ties, amplifying the visibility and impact of Marshall Scholars, and supporting the Marshall Scholarship Program.

Communications

Social Media

In November 2017, the AMS launched its first targeted social media campaign

#ImAMarshall, to compliment the UK Embassy “BeAMarshall” and current Scholars’ “MarshallMonday” campaigns. The #ImAMarshall tweets feature weekly snapshots of Marshall alumni in the news and runs on the front page of the AMS website. As example, in the month of June 2018, MarshallAlums received 16.5K impressions on Twitter.

This summer, the AMS completed filming and production of the first three videos in a series of Marshall Digital Portraits. The digital video pilot series is being developed in partnership with Dan Rather’s News and Guts Production Company. The series aims to address critical issues of our time—highlighting ways in which the work of Marshall Scholars is impacting significant global challenges. The first three videos feature alumni: Dr. Doug Melton (1975), Harvard Stem Cell Institute; Harvard University Professor Danielle Allen (1993), Safra Center for Ethics Professor at Harvard; and Anne McClain (2002), NASA Astronaut who embarked on a NASA mission to the International Space Station in December 2018. Two of the three videos posted thus far on Dan Rather’s Facebook page (in early December 2018) have already received over 380,000 views.

Print & National Media

In December 2017, the AMS worked closely with the British Embassy and alumnus Sewell Chan (1998) to obtain an Associate Press exclusive for the 2018 Marshall Scholars announcement by the British Government - including the full list of Scholar names. The Associated Press exclusive was particularly effective at amplifying the announcement of the 2018 Marshall Scholars, which was picked up by over 100 press outlets (national, regional, international) and carried the news with the full list of Scholar names. This was the first time since 1999 that the New York Times (running the Associated Press story) ran the full list of Marshall Scholar winners’ names. Additional blue chip media outlets, such as the Washington Post, ABC News, the Miami Herald, and the Seattle Times, and over one hundred local and regional papers, university papers and international news, media, and radio, covered the story.

Website and Marshall Communications

Over the spring of 2018, the AMS worked with an experienced legal team to develop and implement a compliance framework for GDPR and its maintenance. AMS privacy, cookies, security, NDAs, and document retention policies were updated. All members were notified of our updates via email and we have established staff and intern GDPR and data training procedures to ensure ongoing compliance.

Also during the spring, the AMS began a guest blog section of the website, where current Scholars, alumni, and other invited guests share reflections and photographs about their time in the UK or another topic of interest. Jessica Bickel-Barlow (2016), Bill De La Rose (2017), Ian O’Grady (2017), Devika Ranjan (2017), David Wagner (2017), and Alina Utrata (2017) have blog posts featured in this section of the AMS website.

Finally, the Winter 2017-2018 AMS Newsletter was printed and distributed in December 2017. It features highlights from the Summer 2017 Harvard Marshall Forum as well as a reprint of the letter from HM Queen Elizabeth II addressed to the AMS, Harvard University, and German Marshall Fund on the commemoration of the 70th Anniversary of the Marshall Plan. The Fall 2018 AMS Newsletter was produced by new Managing Editor Stanley Chang since 1999 that the New York Times (running the Associated News, media, and radio, covered the story.

Fundraising

Scholarship Support

The AMS is delighted that, through the generosity of 200+ Marshall alumni and a matching grant from Reid Hoffman (1990), the AMS Marshall Scholarship Endowment now stands at $1.2M. In September of 2018, the fund was used to support the first AMS endowed Marshall Scholarship. In addition, several alumni continue to support Marshall Scholarships at their respective alma maters: Sussex University; Magdalene College, Cambridge; Magdalene College, Oxford; Lincoln College, Oxford; and Emmanuel College, Cambridge. Through coordination with the AMS, the MACC, and the aforementioned Colleges, these alumni have pledged approximately $600,000 toward Marshall Scholarships at these schools. In addition, the British Schools and University Foundation (BSUF) committed a second round of $25,000 each to support a current scholar studying in the field of music at Kingston University. The AMS is pleased to confirm that BSUF has agreed to extend this grant in perpetuity on the condition that the AMS will continue to provide a matching gift through an alumni donation each year.

In August, the AMS launched the “Marshall Xtra” pilot grant, providing a £1,000 grant from alumni to each of the 83 enrolled Marshall Scholars intended to enrich their time and educational experiences in the UK. The AMS is pleased to be contributing approximately $350,000 in 2018 towards supporting the Scholarship program and Marshall Scholar experience in different ways.

Marshall Challenge

The AMS launched the Marshall Challenge fundraising campaign in the spring of 2017 to support new initiatives that engage Marshalls Scholars to benefit the public, strengthen US-UK ties, and bolster the scholarship program for the 21st Century. By September 2018, the Marshall Challenge fundraising campaign had met its $1,500,000 goal. The AMS subsequently increased its Marshall Challenge goal to $2,000,000, to be raised by December 31, 2018, when the campaign ends. Overall, in 2017, the AMS obtained its highest donor-member participation rate (~20%) in the organization’s history and also saw an increase in donations from non-members and Foundations.

Programs:

Regional & Partner Programming

In the fall of 2017, the AMS hosted 11 regional and partner events in New York, Boston, Washington, and San Francisco and was honored to extend invitation to Marshall alumni for additional events hosted by the New England Consulate and the British Embassy.

AMS events included a guided tour of SF MOMA, a themed dinner discussion on Artificial Intelligence and machine learning, a pre-performance artist talk and matinee performance by American Ballet Theater featuring a series of world-renowned British choreographers, as well as informal social gatherings. Overall in 2017, the AMS hosted 19 events across the country, including the Harvard Marshall Forum, and garnered participation by roughly 1,000 Marshall Scholar attendees and other guests.

Between January and October of 2018, the AMS hosted 17 regional and partner events in Denver, Providence, New York, Boston, Washington, and San Francisco, attended by close to 500 guests and Marshall Scholars. The AMS was honored to co-host an event, in collaboration with the New York Consulate, and to extend additional invitations to Marshall Scholars to attend the New England Consulate and the British Embassy.

As example, AMS events included an off-the-record conversation with Carnegie Endowment for International Peace President, Bill Burns (1978) and Dr. Henry Kissinger on the Art of Diplomacy, moderated by the Permanent Representative to the United Nations from the United Kingdom, Dame Karen Pierce and co-hosted with the NY Consulate as part of our ongoing “special relationship” program series. Other programming included the world premiere of “Six. Twenty. Outrageous” at Symphony Space - three Gertrude Stein plays in the shape of an opera composed by Daniel Thomas Davis (2004), several themed dinner-discussions, as well as informal social gatherings. In addition to regional and partner events, the AMS invited alumni to host the 2018 Scholars in small dinners as part of the UK Embassy-led orientation program and send-off this September.

Annual Event / Marshall Forum

On June 29th and June 30th, 2018, the AMS partnered with the UK Consulate in San Francisco and the Bechtel International Center at Stanford University to present the 2018 Marshall Forum on Innovation. Program attendees included roughly 200 West Coast innovators and Marshall Scholars working across science, engineering, technology, enterprise, education, and philanthropy – including members of the GBX – a network of British entrepreneurs in the Bay Area. The Forum explored the pipeline of scientific invention in fields such as health, biomedicine, genetics, and physics – highlighting radical innovation as well as emerging challenges and opportunities in these fields as they intersect with significant advances in machine learning, artificial intelligence, and data science. LinkedIn Co-founder Reid Hoffman CBE (1990) was interviewed by Crisis Text Line CEO Nancy Lublin (1993) at the gala dinner on Friday, June 29th, as a kick off to the Forum.

The Program Host Committee for the Marshall Forum included: former CalTech Provost, Professor Ed Stolper (1974); San Francisco Consul General, Andrew Whittaker; Stanford’s Bechtel International Center Asst. Vice Provost, Shalini Bhutani; Stanford Bio-X Director Dr. Carla Shatz (1969); Stanford Bustamante Lab Director, Dr. Carlos Bustamante (2001 Marshall Sherfield Fellow); and Stanford Law Professor, Michelle Mello (1993). The event was streamed live on Facebook, and covered on social media.

UK Relations

The AMS continues to work closely with the Marshall Aid Commemoration Commission, UK Consulates, and UK Embassy on outreach efforts to potential applicants, the development of a recurring Marshall Forum which focus will on key issues affecting the transatlantic relationship, and other strategic efforts to strengthen the visibility and vitality of the Marshall Community and Scholarship. The AMS diversity working group, in coordination with the Outreach and Diversity Standing Committee, has begun work on a pilot effort to link alumni with Fellowship Advisors.

Finally, His Royal Highness Prince Charles has agreed to extend his honorary patronage of the Association of Marshall Scholars for a further term of 5 years, through 2023.

SELECTION OF 2018 SCHOLARS

At the Commission meeting held in October 2017, consideration was given to the budget for financial year 2018/2019. The selection of the 2018 Scholars was undertaken by the Regional Selection Committees, listed on page 28 and confirmed by the Advisory Council held in Washington on 4 December 2017. An At-Large Selection Committee was formed in 2017 to consider the award of Scholarships to reserve candidates. A list of the members of this Committee can be found on page 30.

Distribution of new Scholars at British Universities 2014-2018

The Commission encourages Scholars to consider a wide range of institutions at which to study, reflecting the academic excellence of UK Universities.

MARSHALL SHERFIELD FELLOWSHIPS

The Marshall Sherfield Fellowship scheme, which was established in 1997 to mark the 50th anniversary of the Marshall Plan, enables up to two American post-doctoral scientists and engineers to undertake a year of research at any British university or research institute. The Fellowships are named after Lord Sherfield (1904-1996) who was the main architect of the Marshall Scholarship programme in the 1950s and are funded by the Marshall Sherfield Fellowship Foundation which is based in the US.

No new awards were made for 2018.

Full details of the membership of the Sherfield Selection Committees are given in Membership of the Commission and its Committees (Page 30).

SCHOLARSHIP STIPENDS

The revised stipend schedule from 1 October 2018, as determined by HMG, resulted in increases to the allowances payable to Marshall Scholars as follows: - basic monthly living allowance from £1,065 to £1,084 (and from £1,306 to £1,330 for those registered at institutions within the London Metropolitan Police district); book allowance from £414 to £421 for first year Scholars. As a result of the stipend adjustments announced the Commission revised the annual grant for approved research travel and the thesis grant from £275 to £280 and £389 to £396 respectively in October 2018.

In addition the Association of Marshall Scholars (AMS) funded an additional stipend payment of £1,000 per Scholar, known as Marshall Xtra.
